The NASA Earth Surface Mineral Dust Source Survey (EMIT) mission will comprehensively measure the mineral composition of Earth's dust source regions for the first time to help scientists understand how they are warming or cooling our planet. They have diverse resources for explain the EMIT to the people. In addition to this, our goal is to tell people about EMIT at a more basic level and to contribute to bringing it to a wider audience. to do this, we have created and published our website, which contains various articles, an application and a video about EMIT. we are also planning to reach people who cannot access our website, for example, through associations and organizations that provide water well assistance to Africa, such as water well assistance there
